To love our God with all our hearts, let kind-ness fill our deeds, then How ra-pid-ly we dis-ap-prove of oth-ers who trans-gress. But Just who of us can claim that they are whol-ly with-out fault? Yet Some fool-ish-ly blame hand or eye for an-ger, lust or greed, but treat our neigh-bours as our-selves and tend Cre-a-tion's needs. And when we judge, then we are judged; the right-eous too, op-press. If if we fail to do our part, we've sure-ly lost our salt. In lame ex-cus-es can-not heal nor help a world in need. Yet yet we dwell on how we're wronged and hang on to our pains; how temp-ted would we dif-fer had those choic-es been our own? Let's tal-ent wast-ed, help de-nied, the good we do not do, to when we let com-pas-sion rule in ev-ery-thing we do, and can the Good News flour-ish here if bit-ter-ness re-mains?

walk in one a-no-ther's shoes be-fore we would dis-own.
bland-ly say we've done no harm, is less than per-fect too.
re-con-cile with those we've hurt, we let our love break through.
