Look be - yond the cor - ner a - head; see the world that calls you in - Leave be - hind the in - ward con - cern; there is so much more to dis - Rise a - bove the wor - ry of loss; when we love, we take up our stead. Like the fruit - ful bran - ches joined by the vine, so we see our cern. When we cling too long to days that have gone, can we grasp the cross. So re - turn with kind - ness e - ven the hurt; let a flow - er lives in - ter - twine. Put a - side the tran - quil and sweet; find the work to be done? When our chil - dren call from the streets, will we bloom from the dirt. Reach a - cross the boun - dries and walls, and ex - light in peo - ple you greet. For the lives we lead aren't join their dan - cing and beat? Or like sleep - ing ser - vants tend your wel - come to all. In our neigh - bour's face, God's sole - ly our own; what we plant will some day have grown. ten - ding the gate, will we slum - ber 'til it's too late?

im - age is found; and the liv - ing Spir - it a - bounds.
